The Beavers appear regularly on FSN Northwest during the regular season, and have been broadcast on ESPN and CSTV in past seasons. The Beavers are one of the most recognized teams in the nation because they have appeared on ESPN more than any collegiate team over the past three seasons.

National media organizations, such as Baseball America and Rivals.com, have focused on the team. National features on Oregon State players and coaches are common by these outlets. Every Oregon State game is broadcast on the radio and on www.osubeavers.com. Additionally, select home games are available on Spanish Language Radio.

Head coach Pat Casey and the baseball program are the focus of weekly Beaver Sports Talk (radio) segments on Tuesdays during the season, while Beavers All Access, a weekly program on FSN Northwest, spotlights the club as OSU dominates the airwaves and the small screen.

A full-time sports information staff, with Hank Hager as the baseball contact, are on hand to work with the club, serving as liaisons to the media and providing media training.

The Oregon State Dugout Club is devoted to the support of Beaver baseball. Over the past several seasons, projects financed by the OSU Dugout Club include batting cages at Goss Stadium at Coleman Field and helping finance trips that upgrade the quality of the Beavers’ non-league schedule.

One of the group’s major events each year is the OSU Dugout Club Golf Tournament. Look for more information on this year’s event, the 30th annual, as the baseball season progresses.

Annual dues are $75 and include a membership card, OSU baseball cap or T-shirt, and baseball guide. For more information on the Oregon State Dugout Club, call the OSU baseball office at (541) 737-0598.
